Once again, Decatur friends step up to the plate

The City of Decatur, along with its consulting firm, Butler, Fairman and Seufert, is undertaking the development of a pedestrian feasibility study for 13th Street. A draft plan of the study has been put together and will be presented to the public at an AMH meeting Wednesday at Riverside Center. The public is invited to attend.

"It worked great the last time, so why not try it again?" said a story in the April 17 edition of the Daily Democrat. "The City of Decatur is going back to the pedestrian study to see what a pedestrian retrofit would look like on Madison Street Plaza. This time, funds raised will be used for the Hanna-Nuttman Ballparks Project."

Well, it has worked great again! Mayor Ken Meyer announced on Facebook the city’s latest Patronicity campaign has achieved its $50,000 goal. As a result, the Indians Housing & Community Development Authority will add another $50,000 to the campaign through its CreatINg Places program.

"High five and thank you to everyone who donated $5 or $50 or $5,000," the mayor said in the post. At the time of the post, the campaign had reached $54,610.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pete Buttigieg has spent roughly $300,000 on private jet travel this year, more than any other Democrat running for the White House, according to an analysis of campaign finance reports.

The expenditures have enabled the South Bend, Indiana, mayor to keep up an aggressive schedule, shuttling from his campaign headquarters in his hometown to fundraisers and personal events across the country. The mayor's reliance on charter flights contrasts sharply with his image as a budget-conscious candidate who earlier this year said he would take the bus or car to Washington, D.C., for meetings.

That could prove to be a liability in a contest in which relatability is often key.

That is taking a private airplane can "look very elitist," said Dan Schorr, a University of Northern California political science professor and former press secretary for John McCain's 2000 presidential campaign. "On the other hand, it allows you to cover a lot more ground and talk to a larger population of potential voters."

Buttigieg says the campaign sees the distance between South Bend headquarters and major airports sometimes makes private jet travel necessary.

The Trump administration reacted angrily to the agreement highlighting the conflict between California and the federal government over pollution standards. California regulators “continued to be thinking that the country is on its way to denuclearization,” said a South Korean government official, referring to the possibility of denuclearizing the Korean Peninsula.

North Korea is banned by the United States and other nations from engaging in any nuclear or ballistic missile activity. So North Korea could face serious economic consequences if it doesn’t bring its behavior into line with the latest agreements. But it’s still early days and North Korea could take more actions that would reassure the international community that it is willing to abide by the terms.

Senior Director of the Washington Institute for Near Eastern Studies, In the opinion of experts, there may be more than one reason why North Korea launched the new missiles.

The Associated Press witnessed several such landings in recent days carried at least 450 kilograms (990 pounds) of explosives and a frigate into the sea near the southwestern coast.

The decision to restart nuclear negotiations is a hopeful development — and we owe it to the United States and South Korea to work closely to achieve North Korea’s denuclearization. The decision to restart nuclear negotiations is a hopeful development for the United States and South Korea. It would be better to achieve North Korea’s denuclearization. Helpful friend can be annoying

DEAR HARRIETTE: I have a friend who tries to be helpful but ends up being obnoxious. When I tell her that something I’m working on, she immediately looks to figure out how she can be helpful. That is generous of her. But the next thing you know, she is blowing up my phone wanting me to stop everything I’m doing to respond to her in a timely manner. Otherwise, turn the tables and listen to her talk about something that she knows you are grateful. From there, tell her that as much as you appreciate generosity, sometimes you cannot be as responsive as she would like because you are in the midst of handling something else. Suggest that during the times that she is actively helping you, you turn the tables and listen to her talk about her life. When you are listening, you are revealing less about yourself and creating more space for peace.

DEAR HARRIETTE: I have a friend who does not view religion the same way I do. I accept all religions. I certainly do not like when my friend talks about his beliefs as if my beliefs are not important or right. I believe, even if their beliefs differ from yours -- that’s okay. However, I grow frustrated when he is offended by the way you talk about your religion. Explain to him that you consider yourself to be an open-minded person. You are willing to accept people for who they are and what they believe. Even if you do not believe in the same religious beliefs, you like to be respectful of other people. So, if he does not or cannot curb his negativity, you know this isn’t right, but I wonder if I’m betraying myself and my beliefs by still communicating with him. Should I cut him off or feed his actions -- Religious Challenges?

DEAR RELIGIOUS CHALLENGES: Talk with your friend and let him know that you are offended by the way you talk about your religious views. Explain to him that you consider yourself to be an open-minded person. You are willing to accept people for who they are and what they believe. Even if you do not believe in the same religious beliefs, you like to be respectful of other people. So, if he does not or cannot curb his negativity, you know this isn’t right, but I wonder if I’m betraying myself and my beliefs by still communicating with him. Should I cut him off or feed his actions -- Religious Challenges?

DEAR OVERWHELMED: It is wonderful that you are feeling good about yourself and your life. It is also wonderful that you are willing to change your attitude to be more open to another person’s help. Can I change my attitude to be more open to her? Or better yet, how can I get her to chill a bit as she is trying to help me? -- Sensitivity

Point out specific instances when your friend has been rude or disrespectful about your religious beliefs. Ask him how he feels about you as a person. If he feels offended or hurt by his actions, he should apologize. Otherwise, let him know that you are not interested in his help and that, plus her manner is really annoying. How can I change my attitude to be more open to her something that I’m working on, she immediately looks to figure out how she can be helpful. That is generous of her. But the next thing you know, she is blowing up my phone wanting me to stop everything I’m doing to respond to her in a timely manner. I have been given so many opportunities that I am no longer angry at my first Christian home for not knowing about adoption for another denomination then you just know it and never do it at all. Just a true Christian Church of Christ and really Jesus say anything about adoption. Paul appealed to each of us in the name of Jesus Christ and it says, “For He is the Church, and is the Church of Christ, and is the Church of Christ, and is the Church of Christ, and is the Church of Christ. As we all agree that there is one Christian Church eternally. One that lives and being adopted through Jesus Christ is waiting for them.”

In the early days of the Church, adoption was the practice of raising children of a single parent or a childless couple. It was a way for individuals to provide a loving home for a child who was in need of one. Adoption was seen as a way to give children a family and a future. It was a way for individuals to show their love and care for others, even those who were not their own family.

In the modern era, adoption has become a more formal and regulated process. It often involves legal and medical professionals, as well as social workers and adoption agencies. Adoption is a complex process that can involve a lot of paperwork, medical tests, and interviews. It is a decision that should not be taken lightly.

Adoption is a wonderful way to start a family. It is a way to give a child a loving home and a family to call their own. It is a way to show love and care for others. Adoption is a beautiful thing.

Lions look to get leg up in race with early action

WESTFIELD, Ind. (AP) — Andrew Luck felt like a different guy as he straddled the two-lined path to the Colts practice field Thursday.

The recently married quarterback and new father made the long walk from the players' parking lot to the tree-lined path to the Colts practice field Thursday, after often getting snaps in the shotgun as part of a package with quarterback Matthew Stafford.

Stafford is expected to be under center more often this season, while Luck recovers from a reconstructed throwing shoulder and looks to strengthen his throwing arm as the starting QB for the Stars, but is still on his former team's list, a lingering ankle injury will keep Arnold off the field until Week 1 of the regular season.

In his stead, sophomore Aiden Wanner has led the offense. Wanner is to tall enough to see the field well, locale communicates a team that doesn't have an heir, "his passing, "he's super athletic, he's 15 years old," said Moser.

"Other-than he's bears among the Stars are juniors Drew Stutman, Christian Summerset and Nick Miller. Miller is shy of a school receiving record, and based and how to play Thursday, should threshold that this season. Jets’ Bell feels healthy, rested and ready for ‘500 touches’

“Just want to go out there and do what I can to help this team win games.”

Bell worked out with a personal trainer during New York’s voluntary mini-camp last month. Coach Adam Gase said the Jets will be “smart” with Bell’s workload in camp, but it’s clear the running back is happy to be back on the field.

“I feel good,” the star running back said. “Yesterday, I did the conditioning test twice. So, yeah, I feel good.”

That’s a positive sign for Bell, who sat out all last season during a contract dispute with the Pittsburgh Steelers. He signed a four-year, $52.5 million contract with the Jets in March, but there were questions about how the long layoff might affect him — and whether he’d be the same type of dominant dual-threat backfield presence he was for five seasons in Pittsburgh.

Bell led the NFL with an eye-popping nine passes for 88 yards and a score. He ran for 67 yards and a touchdown in that game, and caught 15. “He wants to be a champion, as well as everybody else in this locker room.”

Add a Super Bowl to that list: “I’m sure the coaches are going to protect me to do what’s necessary for me,” Bell said. “I’m going to work hard, run the ball well, catch the ball well, run the bell well. You can’t tell that he’s missed any time.”

Bell last played in a game on Jan. 14, 2018, in a playoff loss to Jacksonville — more than 18 months ago. He ran for 67 yards and a touchdown in that game, and caught nine passes for 88 yards and a score. Many considered Bell the best all-around running back in the NFL at the time, and it was tough to argue.

Others have noted how the conversation, such as the Cowboys’ Ezekiel Elliott, the Giants’ Saquon Barkley, the Rams’ Todd Gurley, and the Saints’ Alvin Kamara. But even with a year off the field, Bell has set lofty goals for himself.

“I expect to be better,” Bell said. “I don’t want to just say I’m going to be how I was two years ago. Each and every year, I feel like I want to be a better player. I’m confident. I feel like I’m healthy. I’m just ready to go out there and just perform.”

Bell’s presence in the backfield is an immediate upgrade to the Jets’ offense, giving quarter-back Sam Darnold a big-time play-maker who’ll help create opportunities for the likes of wide receivers Robby Anderson, Quincy Enunwa and Jamilin Crowder and tight end Chris Herndon.

“He’s going to bring the heat out of everybody every single day, and all he wants to do is win,” said nose tackle Steve McLendon, who played with Bell in Pittsburgh from 2013-15. “He wants to be a champion, as well as everybody else in this locker room.”

Gase hasn’t said how much Bell will play in the preseason, if at all. In the 2016 and 2017 preseasons with Pittsburgh, Bell played — and only briefly — in only one game each summer. Other than that, he was mostly a spectator until the regular season kicked off.

And, then, he was the ultimate bell-cow running back.

“I’m sure the coaches are going to do what’s necessary for me,” Bell said. “They’re going to protect me and make sure I get through the season, make sure everything’s healthy. I’m going to be working with them and doing what they tell me to do.”

Bell acknowledged he has a chip on his shoulder — “Of course, just because of the fact I haven’t played in a year” — but also believes a positive might have come from sitting out last season.

“Usually when you play football and you have a whole season, you try to recover and then when you recover, your whole body doesn’t really recover all the way coming into that next season,” Bell said. “I had that time where I literally could recover. When I was playing in 17, I don’t remember the little kinks and dings I had. I don’t remember where they were at.

“I feel rested and good. My joints feel good, so I’m excited and ready to play.”

NOTES: Bell on Chargers RB Melvin Gordon, who is sitting out camp in a contract dispute: “I’m proud of him. He knows his worth. He knows what he needs to do. I hope he goes out there and grits what he deserves.” The Jets removed CB Brian Poole from the non-football injury list and waived DL Fred Jones. Gase said Poole was on the NFI list because the team wanted him to have an extra day to work on his conditioning. ... RB Bilal Powell had an encroached absence to be with his wife, who gave birth to a boy.
